Welcome to the 2018 Atlantic Coast Conference Outdoor Track and Field Championships. As you enjoy our competition, you are witnessing national caliber student athletes performing at the highest level.

The ACC is coming off a successful fall and winter sports season in which our conference representatives captured two national championships and an impressive 12 individual NCAA titles. We look forward to continuing a banner year as our spring sports teams and student athletes continue to build on a longstanding winning tradition.

Last season saw ACC track and field complete an extraordinary year as the Virginia Tech men and women swept both Championships, competing against each other on August 11th and 12th. The NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships a month later saw the Virginia Tech men win ACC team on a program-best third-place finish. The Cougars’ Faith Miller bagged her third title to claim the shot put and the discus. Louisiana senior Edier Kitchik took out the NCAA men’s mile in 3:59.74, and the ACC paced another national title on the women’s side, where Virginia Tech junior thrower Iona Stevenson claimed the gold medal for the second time in three seasons.

The ACC has long stood for excellence in the track and in the classroom. That commitment was demonstrated last year, when more than 270 teams and field student-athletes were named to the ACC Academic Honor Roll, being awarded a D3 GPA or better for the school year. This was one of many academic highlights in a year that saw 88 ACC teams receive Academic Honor Roll, having earned a 3.0 GPA or better for the school year. This was one of many academic highlights in a year that saw 88 ACC teams receive Academic Honor Roll, having earned a 3.0 GPA or better for the school year.

Our congratulations and best wishes go out to all of our student-athletes, coaches and programs, and, again, we say thanks to each of you for your support of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Sincerely,
John D. Swofford, Commissioner
Atlantic Coast Conference
